

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A dust withdrawing arrangement has a plurality of individual enclosures each enclosing a respective one of working areas from which dust has to be removed, a common enclosure which is arranged around said individual enclosures, a negative pressure generating unit for generating a negative pressure in an interior of the common enclosure, and a passage associated with each of the individual enclosures and leading exclusively to the interior of the common enclosure without communicating with passages from other individual enclosures.